More Audio Paths Than You Have Ears For

When faced with too many incoming calls, the ability to distinguish “who is who” is critical. The new DICES VoIP system can now solve that problem by providing up to three separate voice paths down to the end user. Each path can be independently directed to either ear (or both) in the headset, or to external speakers—all configurable by individual voice key for each user’s preferences.

You Might Want to Grow Another Ear. So, for the best in new IP-based C² voice conferencing, the choice is clear...DICES VoIP!
